Editorial

It is a pleasure to share with all the fellows that the 2015 issue of Pakistan Library Association Journal (PLA Journal) has been published successfully. The journal is before you and we have tried to get highly qualified professionals on-board to make this happen.

I visualize a brilliant future of this journal which would cater for the needs of thousands of young LIS scholars whose rich intellectual potential have not been hitherto allowed to develop properly due to limited provision of opportunities. These dynamic and youthful minds of Pakistani LIS community are certainly willing and looking forward to contribute to make this journal a true platform of learning and citadel of research.

The current issue accommodates reasonably diverse themes of LIS research e.g. bibliometric studies, survey of college libraries, library websites, issues like plagiarism and competencies in Pakistan's perspective.

We believe that the publication series of PLA Journal is a step towards achieving the overall objectives of Pakistan Library Association by recognizing the research activities of LIS professionals in Pakistan.

Research shows that such activities are rapidly increasing; however, more efforts are required to uplift the face of Pakistani LIS community worldwide. Research-oriented individuals will not only fill the gap in demand and supply of LIS profession but will also continue to promote LIS research culture in the country.

Researchers are now constantly looking for impact factor journals and the vision of Pakistan Library Association journal team is to make a way forward of making it an Impact Factor journal. We know it is long way to achieve this objective, but we are committed to get it done. We also hope that articles in this issue would prove beneficial for future research and planning activities in the realm of Library & Information Science in the developing countries.

I appeal to all those at the helm of affairs to join us in this gigantic noble task of national importance to make this Journal a great seat of learning and a platform for our young and seasoned researchers simultaneously to express themselves in the form of their publications.

Any suggestions and queries are warmly welcomed and highly appreciated. We are facilitating and actually this journal belongs to all the stakeholders here and there.
